
The future of the COD franchise

Posted by El_Nino - 2010/02/15 20:07

I was reading this tonight and I can't believe the rumour was actually true but "Activision Blizzard CEO Bobby Kotick quoted saying that the Call of Duty franchise will head the way of World of Warcraft and become subscription-based charging $15 per-month to play.

Would I be correct in quoting all of us in saying "FUCK THAT!!!"

Also a Treyarch release added that the next installment due November 2010 would be set during the Vietnam conflict - and takes particular influence from classic movies Apocalypse Now and Platoon. No word on Dedi servers!!

=====

Re:The future of the COD franchise

Posted by ORCA - 2010/02/16 19:40

I havent heard about the subscription part, but the reference to WoW is that the COD Franchise will turn a game into a MMORG, basically a role play like Warcraft.

Andy & I are used to Guild Wars, and I think Company of Heroes is a great multiplayer game. I still would like to have a go of CoH together against the computer. It helped me learn how to set up the troops, and you help each other out so no one gets annihilated !

Lets keep an eye out for more news.

:army:

=====