Final Fantasy XIII

One for all the Animie fans.....

All the reviews are true....very linear, etc.

However, the FMV and the engine generated cutsceens are amazing. Battle system is good, once it gets going.

I love it, well worth a purchase....but then with 6 hours of top class FMV in the game, I don't even care too much about the limited gameplay.

Despite running at lower resolution on the X360, it still upscales to 1080p (effectively anti aliased), and still looks fabulous.

I can't emagine what the PS3 version looks like at full 1080 and improved lighting, bump mapping, etc.

Only downside is that it became a £10 bargain basement game in Japan after 3 weeks of release (due to massive sales and limited replay value), so it may be worth hanging on for a while for prices to drop.

I'm in chapter 11 (side quest 18).

Just a note to save you some time. If you go down one of the routes off the main open area and have to fight Vanilles summon thingy....you need to turn back and carry on with the side quests.

Also, at the entrance of that passage are 2 big fighting monsters. Spam them with Com/Rav/Rav for easy kill and 6600 points. Walk up the hill to the save point, walk back down and they re-appear. I did this for 2 hours and got every char fully ranked to 4 in each of the 3 standard skills, plus around 400,000 cp points to spend on each when i know what to do with them.

Some of the quest giving stones are hard to find so I found a good site.

I think you can go back to these after the story has ended, so maybe you arn't supposed to finish all of them on the way through.

Where did you get the cash from? 27 hours in not moved much further than I was that one you told me at the top where the two monsters are fighting was rubbish 6600 and its takes ages to kill them the best one is just a little way into the tunnel the 3 bombs and 2 robot things 5100 in around 20 - 30 secs,

Personally I would go the whole way Light fang lights sister and vaniel.

Strange.

When you kill last boss, it unlocks level 10 so you can go back to pulse and kick some ass.

Are you sure you didn't miss something.....

Probably I finished the game watched the last video and then saved game it then took me to the main menu I loaded and it loaded up the last chapter but I turned it off before seeing where it loaded at. It would make no sense considering they lose their brands which give them magic powers
