Sledgehammer Games is a video game developer established in the San Francisco Bay area in 2009. The new studio facility, located in Foster City, California, was unveiled in February, 2010. A wholly owned subsidiary of Activision, Sledgehammer Games was founded by Glen Schofield , and Michael Condrey , the former GM and COO of Visceral Games, a subsidiary of Electronic Arts. Glen and Michael were the creators and development leadership behind the Action Game of the Year award winning franchise, Dead Space.

The Sledgehammer Games microsite went live on December 8, 2009 with information on the studio development team, location, and job openings. Speculation on the studio's next game was offered by industry sites Kotaku and Gamasutra. On March 2, 2010, Activision officially announced that Sledgehammer Games is developing an action-adventure based Call of Duty game series.
